'Beton Brut' = 'Raw Concrete' = the idea that materials are used in their unfinished or raw state. Sapele wood is often considered to be of secondary grade and is so used in joinery and not furniture. Drawing from the principles of Brutalism I used Sapele wood in it's unpainted, unstained state as a proudly 'inferior' wood. I used ideas of abstraction to deconstruct the traditional 'chair' to it's necessary parts and in-so-doing produced a chair that has only three parts – a back, a front, and a seat.
